Sufa 31—The Law (Al-Hakam)

- 1) The source, the well of all form, meaning and rule;
- 2) The beginning point from which all lesser law manifests;
- 3) Allah is the one true and only Divine Creator.
- 4) The first law is Divine Law and so the law of Allah.
- 5) Allah is the Divine Creator of all things,
- 6) The collection of all words, ideas, and form, there is nothing greater.
- 7) Thus, all law must come from the Divine and Allah,
- 8) As all the words of law are born from the Creator.
- 9) A Law is a rule, given from divine instruction, discovery, or reason of nature.
- 10) The existence of such laws are self evident by the existence of the wisdom that frames them.
- 11) Divine law is the law that defines the spirit, purpose and instruction of Allah through existence.
- 12) The key of all Divine Law is the Golden Rule:
- 13) That “All are equal under the law of Allah and subject to it”.
- 14) Natural law is the law that defines the operation of the will of Allah through existence in the form of the world.
- 15) Therefore, a competent man recognizes Divine Law not simply because he has been told,
- 16) But that he can see and reason to some of the logic and mind of the Divine Creator.
- 17) Yet a law made by men, can never be greater than a natural law or Divine law;
- 18) Nor can laws made by men, even be greater than a dictate or decree that gains legitimacy to the extent it does not contradict Divine Law and Natural Law and possesses the consent of the people.
- 19) An unjust decree or dictate by men, can never be considered law, even if such threat and force is used.
- 20) All valid law can be reasoned and argued logically.
- 21) Challenge unjust law
